

William McCullagh

Everything is art. No matter how complex something is, it starts out as a simple drawing. An idea from ones imagination put on paper and shared with others. Whether its a rough sketch that goes on to be the plans for a life saving device or the inspiration for a painting, the ability to express the idea to others is important. From the cars we drive to the homes we live, the clothes we wear to the furniture we use, large industrial machinery to true classical paintings, everything is art and it is important.
