

PAUL KATHER.

pkather210@gmail.com

From Graphic Design to painting, my artistic journey has been one of evolution. What started as an elective in college, quickly became my passion. However as life took me on a different path, my art took a backseat. Now with a renewed focus on my craft and a decade of experience, I am excited to bring my unique perspective back to the art world.

Painting is a reflection of one's observations.

In my paintings, I deliberately eschew the conventional constraints of traditional perspective and measured proportional relationships. Through the juxtaposition of these elements, I seek to evoke a visceral response in the viewer—a subtle shift in perception or a moment of contemplation.

How one goes about defining/interpreting these observations is key to understanding the work.

